AUTHOR VISIT WITH SARAH ANGLETON

Author of Launching Sheep and Other Stories from the Intersection of History & Nonsense

Saturday, September 16th at 2pm

Featuring Posts from her humorous history blog, The Practical Historian, Jacksonville native Sarah Angleton will discuss her new book of essays that recount some of history's quirkiest characters and strangest events. Part history and part memoir, Angleton ties her personal life to the most off the wall events in human history.

STAFF PICKS

Check each month for new book suggestions from library staff!

Bridget: Outlander by Diana Gabaldon "A great adventure with a mix of time travel and romance."

Chris: Hunger by Roxane Gay "A compelling memoir about the author's body weight, the causes for her weight gain and the trials of living as an overweight person in American society. Anyone who has ever struggled with eating or body issues will relate to this insightful short prose."

Cindy: The Song of Hartgrove Hall by Natasha Solomons "Three brothers are back from WWII and determined to bring their family home back to life. Enter a beautiful singer who creates a lifetime of tangled webs of love triangles, family duty, forgiveness and joy."

Diane: The Highland Grooms Series by Julia London "A delightful tale of Scottish chieftains, family treachery, tangled inheritance and, of course, love in the Highland mist!"
